Presentation

CC - Presentation to the City Council by Streets for All Regarding the "Venice Boulevard for All" Initiative

Michael Schneider, Streets for All, provided background on himself and the organization, as well as a presentation on the "Venice Boulevard for All" Initiative.

Mayor Fisch received City Council consensus to join neighbors in signing a letter of support for the project to be brought back for approval at the April 26 City Council meeting.

Council Member Eriksson received clarification regarding the function of Streets for All; implementation; and traffic studies to estimate the impact on people driving cars.

Mayor Fisch invited public comment.

The following member of the public addressed the City Council: David Coles, Bike Culver City, expressed full support for the plan and offered the assistance.

oOo

Joint Public Comment - Items NOT on the Agenda

Jeremy Green, City Clerk, discussed procedures for making public comment.

Mayor Fisch invited public comment.

The following members of the public addressed the City Council:

Tien Makinen was called to speak but did not answer.

Ronald Ostrin observed that the concepts of Black Lives Matter and Defend, Don't Defund were not mutually exclusive; felt a discussion of improving the Culver City Police Department (CCPD) was appropriate; discussed allocating resources for continuing education; proper resource allocation for crisis response; mental health; concern with blindly following a slogan to cut the CCPD budget by 50%; looking progressive vs. achieving social progress; necessary work to achieve goals; the importance of placing the highest value on human life; progress being made; the need to proceed with compassion and intelligence; and he stated that the best must be demanded from CCPD and from the City Council.

Mayor Fisch invited everyone to attend the April 26 meeting to consider the Public Safety Review Process.

Salvador George provided background on himself; discussed construction tax fraud; announced Tax Fraud Days of Action a series of events beginning on April 14; discussed tax evasion; defrauding communities out of much needed tax revenue; decreased revenue as a result of COVID-19; and he offered to meet with Council Members to provide additional information.

Mayor Fisch provided his email address and encouraged Mr. George to contact him.

Keith Jones provided background on himself; discussed the issue of defunding the police; other cities that reduced funding to the police and reversed their actions after facing issues; the report commissioned by California Public Safety Management (CPSM); CCPD staffing levels; the report created by Paul Sarabia; he asserted that Mayor Fisch was the swing vote and asked him to work to keep staffing at current levels and add more staff as crime increases or people retire; noted continuing reforms; acknowledged work still to be done; he compared CCPD to schools; and he indicated that additional funding was required to make improvements.

Colin Diaz acknowledged the accomplishments of Feed Culver and encouraged people to donate to support them; announced that the Chamber of Commerce would be hosting a Medicare 101 webinar on April 13; discussed re-opening; discoverculver.com; the vaccine roll-out and sites in Culver City; and he applauded the City Council for their efforts, asking that they work to conclude the meeting before midnight.

David Metzler encouraged anyone interested in the issue of housing to attend the General Plan Advisory Committee meetings; announced the Land Use Mobility Community Workshop on April 29 with additional information available at pictureculvercity.com; discussed things happening at the state level that the City has no control over; and implementation in Culver City.

Bubba Fish provided background on himself; discussed the Move Culver City project; transformative change; action taken at the beginning of the pandemic; equity, climate and safety improvements associated with changes made; corporate interests asking the City to close the streets to people; influence; funding of mobility studies; and he expressed support for making the changes made permanent.

Janee Lennox asked the City Council to support demands of the community to defund the police; expressed concern with the constant denial of the experience of the Black community; she discussed current events; history of the City; reimagining Public Safety for the entire community; the loss of George Floyd; the need for justice by defunding the police; and building a new Culver City that accepts everyone.

Mayor Fisch reiterated his invitation to the April 26 City Council meeting to consider the Public Safety Review Process.

Art Salazar was called to speak, but did not respond.

Dalia Mekhail was called to speak, but did not respond.

Debbie Mackey spoke on behalf of the Environmental Services Department of Southern California Hospital; discussed employees and their families that have been infected; trying to keep things safe for patients; and she asked the City Council to pass the ordinance.

Joshua McCline was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Jett Monteclaro was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Donetta Thomas Lancie discussed her experiences as a health care worker seeing people pass away from COVID, and she asked that the Hero Pay ordinance be passed.

Larhonda Smith was called to speak, but could not be heard.

Harriet Omorgieva was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Arthur Giobalyan was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Katrice Frierson expressed support for Hero Pay; discussed the toll that COVID-19 has taken on health care workers; unforeseen events due to the pandemic; and she asked that City Council to support the Hero Pay ordinance.

Melissa Gandara provided background on herself; discussed statements made by management regarding support given to employees; difficulties finding childcare; missing work to take care of her son who became infected with COVID-19; compensation; costs for childcare in order to go to work; she indicated that she had not received the promised childcare stipend; and she asked the City Council to support the Hero Pay ordinance.

Julia Ehlert, SEIU UHW, provided background on herself; discussed issues faced by hospital workers; and she asked the City to support the Hero Pay ordinance.

Nohemi Gutierrez was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Michael Kartt discussed his experiences as a respiratory therapist addressing COVID-19 noting that when they were called upon, they answered.

Gregory Monteclaro was called to speak, but did not respond.

Lileth Mansour was called to speak, but did not respond.

Nissa Gamez was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Melanya Khatchtryan was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Art Espinoza was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Kathleen Pittman was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Arthur Giobalyan was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Evelyn Thomas was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Ifeoma Ibenegbu was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Michaela Islao was called to speak, but was not present in the meeting.

Maky Peters discussed the toll taken on healthcare workers; the opportunity for Culver City to do something important; and acknowledgement of sacrifices made by health care workers.

Jamie Wallace discussed logistics and jurisdiction of Southern California Hospital since part of it is located outside of the City.

Colin Diaz expressed opposition to the ordinance; acknowledged the work of the frontline workers; discussed considering the full impact on jobs; vaccinations; reductions to daily case rates; concern with jeopardizing the economy and putting people out of work; closures and loss of jobs; the potential to hurt the community; vacant storefronts; increased homeless issues; he suggested a pilot program with City staff since Police, Fire and Transportation workers have been on the front lines; and he indicated that every City that has enacted a similar ordinance has faced lawsuits due to overreach into the private sector.

Discussion ensued between staff and Council Members regarding workers who put themselves at risk by going to work every day; resurgences; the importance of support for and by professionals in the health care industry and in the food service industry; legal challenges; scare tactics; stores closed in lower-income areas where people have less political power; political consequences for taking away food access to low income people; record profits being made by corporations; extra measures taken by Southern California Hospital to communicate safety; the unprecedented times; those with the privilege to be able to stay home and not be exposed; workers who contract COVID on the job; people putting their lives in danger; other areas that have taken action to enact Hero Pay; the temporary nature of the proposed increase; continued infections and deaths in the coming months; the number of stores affected; the false narrative of stalling economic recovery; companies that have made the most money in the last 12 months; asking that companies share profits with some of their workers for a limited amount of time; efforts to bring the item forward sooner; concern that only a few specific industries and companies have been singled out; concern with interfering in the private sector; concern with creating a socialized labor market controlled by the government; the number of cities that have taken no action; closure of under-performing stores; people who were unafraid in the pandemic; concern with the City stepping in on issues between the employees and owners in the pandemic; the ease of spending other people's money; having a more honest discussion by considering spending City money; appreciation for those working on the frontlines and for the bravery of people who spoke up about the issue; people sharing their trauma so that others will listen; acknowledging those closest to the pain; the fact that the pandemic is still in process; acknowledgement of those who sacrificed during the process; the role of government in the community; extra steps taken by businesses to keep the public and employees safe; increased costs for businesses; the feeling that the City should not interfere with private businesses; providing additional pay to City employees who also work on the front lines; unsung heroes; concern with singling out certain sectors, and leaving out other essential workers; recognition of entities that have gone above and beyond; minimum wage; matching what Los Angeles is doing; boosting low wage workers; discussion of a broader solution to include a bonus; actions by the state; concern with waiting any longer to consider the item; conditions at Southern California Hospital; concern with bifurcating the action; and allowing for additional consideration of changes at the second reading.

Vice Mayor Lee moved to support a Hero Pay ordinance. Council Member McMorris seconded the motion and the discussion continued.

Additional discussion ensued between staff and Council Members regarding length of time for the effectiveness of the ordinance; the time frame for consideration; concern with changing the nature of an ordinance at a second reading; votes necessary for an urgency ordinance; level of workers to be included; duplication of specificity in the Los Angeles ordinance; cross-jurisdiction issues with Southern California Hospital; time, resources and money being expended for a temporary ordinance; other sectors excluded from the ordinance; staff time; concern with a potential store closure and negative impacts to residents; potential negative effects with every decision made and staff time associated with every item considered; creation of two separate ordinances; the current motion; returning with a first reading of two ordinances; covered hospitals; the definition of hospitals in the Health and Safety Code; clarification regarding the definition of essential hospital workers; and inclusion of custodial staff.

Vice Mayor Lee and Council Member McMorris agreed to amendments to the proposed motion to create two ordinances.

MOVED BY VICE MAYOR LEE AND SECONDED BY COUNCIL MEMBER MCMORRIS THAT THE CITY COUNCIL DIRECT THE CITY MANAGER TO RETURN WITH A FIRST READING OF TWO ORDINANCES FOR HERO PAY: ONE FOR GROCERY WORKERS, AND ONE FOR ESSENTIAL HOSPITAL WORKERS NOT INCLUDING THOSE EXCLUSIVELY PERFORMING MANAGERIAL OR SUPERVISORY FUNCTIONS, PHYSICIANS, OR SURGEONS AT COVERED HOSPITALS OPERATING WITHIN THE BORDERS OF CULVER CITY.

THE MOTION CARRIED BY THE FOLLOWING VOTE:

AYES: FISCH, LEE, MCMORRIN
NOES: ERIKSSON, VERA

Item A-2

CC - Adoption of a Resolution Establishing Guiding Principles for Culver City's 2021-2029 Housing Element Update

Mayor Fisch discussed length of time allowed for the public to be heard; the process; additional opportunities to be heard; and clarification that nothing would be done at the meeting to eradicate zones or intensify usage.

Ashley Hefner Hoang, Advance Planning Manager, provided a summary of the material of record.

Mayor Fisch invited public comment.

The following members of the public addressed the City Council:

Kelly Kent indicated being a member of the School Board, but speaking on behalf of herself; discussed teachers and support staff that had moved during the pandemic; obstacles to re-opening; the impact of housing on everything; and she felt that enabling increased density would be beneficial to the children.

Keren Sookne expressed support for increasing the capacity for affordable housing; discussed climate action; allowing people to live where they work; reduced commutes and sprawl; preserving a barrier between humans and nature; making every effort to allow housing opportunities for essential workers and all others; the importance of diversity of voices; equity; innovation; and she expressed appreciation for those attending the meeting in spite of their pain related to current events.

Amy Elsey discussed the responsibility of Council Members to represent the interests of constituents; residents that are not aware of substantial changes to the City being proposed; resident input into the development of the downtown area; the goal of increasing residency in the City by 50%; the number of rentals currently available; she asserted that there was not a housing crisis in Culver City; and she asked that a City-wide vote be held before making changes to the City.

John Wacker was called to speak, but was not in the meeting.

Bonnie Wacker was called to speak, but was not in the meeting.

Max Gabl spoke expressing concern that a three-person majority could make major changes without sufficient notification to residents; he discussed the impacts of the proposed changes to residents; efforts to reduce the police and increase taxes; feeling that one cannot speak up without being called racist; those who work their entire lives to invest in their homes; money and power; and he asserted that many people speaking up to end zoning laws are paid speakers who do not live in the City.

Andrea Bardin expressed opposition to the proposed abolishment of single-family zoning in Culver City; discussed concern with the number of new units proposed over the next 8 years; overcrowding of streets and schools; current development already in progress; large companies coming into the City; people who choose to take a job in the City that know they will be commuting; she questioned whether north Santa Monica, Bel Air and Beverly Hills were also going to be required to have condominiums next to houses; and why Culver City should be responsible for housing those employees.

Mark Herscovitz did not believe that any resolution considering getting rid of R-1 single-family zoning should even be considered; discussed those who moved to Culver City to get away from density; mixed-use buildings sitting empty in the City because they are not affordable; areas already designated as multi-family housing; and he asked the City Council to not consider adopting the resolution.

Nancy Barba, Culver City for More Homes, provided background on herself; expressed support for adoption of the Housing Element as proposed; she asserted that the City needed to take steps to make housing affordable and equitable; discussed adding neighbors in the City; decreased dependence on cars and carbon emissions; and increased access to good jobs, schools, racially integrated neighborhoods, equity, a growing tax base and a stronger economy.

Julie Hammons felt it was necessary to fix the housing crisis with the affordable housing resolution; discussed the ten year plan; the new face of low income; fear that low income renters would bring down property values; providing an opportunity for people to live in a better area with good schools and transit; people who have to commute long distances due to the high cost of living in Culver City; the history of clauses in Culver City property titles that owners could not sell to non-whites; and targeting well-documented fears of racism and integration.

Alex Kessel was called to speak, but did not respond.

Linda T was called to speak, but did not respond.

Ron Bassilian received clarification that Anthony Rizzo had ceded a minute of time; he acknowledged that the resolution was not as simple as abolishing single-family zoning; discussed activists; those who indicated that they had not heard about the meeting to discuss the issue of single-family zoning; meeting state-wide Regional Housing Needs Assessment (RHNA) goals for housing; providing a green-light to developers to do whatever they want; the lack of a guide for affordability; older multi-family units being torn down and replaced by four-story condos; preservation of affordable buildings in the City; the importance of communication; support for responsible growth with an eye to the character of the City; and the mission of Protect Culver City.

Steve Siegel was called to speak, but did not respond.

Jared Morgan provided background on himself; discussed the shrinking Black population in the City; addressing the lack of affordable housing as a core element to anti-racist policies; the need to value lives, family and equity over protecting property values for the white majority; concern with those that equate equitable values with socialism; and he thanked the Council for their review and support of more housing.

Michelle Weiner was called to speak, but could not be heard.

James MacGaffey expressed support for the resolution to add more housing; discussed housing prices; the limited group of people who can afford such homes; requirements to provide affordable housing; distribution of affordable housing equitably across the City; segregation of higher and lower income residents; he urged the City Council to provide more well-designed housing and low-income housing throughout the community; and he encouraged the City to make great efforts to distribute information regarding the proposed changes to combat the disinformation that stokes fears.

Connor Finney urged the City Council to adopt the resolution; asserted that every unit not built displaces people along the Expo and Crenshaw Line; discussed the regional housing market; the need to take the reforms seriously; job growth in the City; and those who were lucky to buy into the market years ago vs. younger people coming in for work who need a place to live.

Bryan Sanders discussed name calling about the issue; concern with getting into identity politics rather than talking about ideas; how to get historically disenfranchised people into single-family homes; creation of a local trust fund to allow families to have financial help; fighting institutional racism; correcting the wrongs of the past; concern with a blanket removal of single-family zoning; an observation that the person who is going to tear down a single-family home and build a large development is probably not from the City and not going to charge an affordable rent; he expressed concern with a Trojan Horse; and wanted to see examination of land parcels on an individual basis with a case by case analysis.

Jeanine Wisnosky Stehlin discussed notification to alleviate misinformation; ensuring that people feel heard and part of the solution; direction from the state; the state mandate; confusion; she asked that everyone look at each other as allies; she felt there was time to get things right; and she did not want to see people left out or hurt by the process or by words.

Elias Platte-Bermeo, Culver City for More Homes, expressed support for the resolution and for a Housing Element Update that brings more affordable housing to Culver City for all income levels; indicated that he did not see a way to stay in the City long-term or ever be able to afford property; discussed consideration of how to house people; using land in a way to provide affordability to all walks of life and income levels and fight climate change; and the need for a transformative Housing Element.

Allen Lulu expressed support for the resolution; requested clarity regarding the details; discussed compliance with the state mandate; concern with high rises being built next to his home; conflicting interests and goals; increasing the numbers of workers in the City, but not housing; and he asked that the City quickly address misinformation being spread.

Karen Hilsberg was called to speak, but did not respond.

Lisa Marie Desai was called to speak, but did not respond.

Hope Parrish expressed disappointment with the rapid approach to rezoning the City; discussed pressure from the state to redesign the Housing Element and meet RHNA numbers; the need for outreach to the single-family homeowner population; meetings to discuss mansionization and Airbnbs, but none to discuss elimination of R-1 zoning; the importance of affordable housing; the need for transparency; creating a community for all walks of life; and concern with giving developers a pass.

Margot L indicated that she is a new homeowner in the City; discussed concerns voiced by certain Council Members that they did not see a copy of the resolution until three days before the March 22 meeting; adequate time for review; land use issues in Culver City; she felt that the Housing Element resolution had been made available to the public for review; noted the responsibility of Council Members to educate themselves and be prepared for meetings; and she expressed support for the proposed resolution.

Luanne Chang was called to speak, but did not respond.

George Hewitt was called to speak, but did not respond.

James Meehan discussed comments made in the Arbor Day recognition stating that trees increase property values in the community noting that elimination of single-family zoning would have the opposite effect, and he felt the changes would provide opportunities for investors to scoop up property and develop it which would be good for them, but not for single-family homeowners.

Sara Fields was called to speak, but did not respond.

Leah Lee felt there were safeguards in place to assure a thoughtful and transparent process; hoped that Councilmembers Eriksson and Vera had been able to take more time to review the item and consider it; discussed fear mongering language used in the Protect Culver City fliers; concern with reducing the word equitable to a loophole; and she indicated that as a single-family homeowner and landlord, she wanted to see the City adopt the resolution.

David Voncannon indicated that he served on the Planning Commission but was not speaking for it; he expressed appreciation for staff efforts to make information more readable and accessible; acknowledged the ongoing discussion of affordable housing; discussed the matrix of guidelines; concern with impacts to the City as a whole; destroying the diversity of housing in the City; and he felt there was a way to achieve RHNA goals without eliminating R-1 zoning.

Todd Shays was called to speak, but did not respond.

Janee Lennox was called to speak, but did not respond.

Eden Miller expressed support for the proposed resolution; asked the City to imagine something better; discussed the push to utilize public transportation to connect to other areas; providing a more equitable and diverse community; available information; communication; and people present to speak on the issue.

Ken Palmer was called to speak, but did not respond.

Matt Tweedie thanked the City Council for their work on the General Plan Element; felt that very few homeowners were aware of the proposed changes; and noted the importance of getting the larger community involved.

Jennifer Trapnell was called to speak, but did not respond.

Roger Bernardin was called to speak, but did not respond.

Melissa Sanders was called to speak, but did not respond.

Christopher Tang was called to speak, but did not respond.

Doug Felts was called to speak, but did not respond.

Jamie Wallace was called to speak, but did not respond.

Yolanda Arias-Arenas expressed opposition to the proposed resolution; asserted that the changes would result in a community that resembles Palms; she did not want to see a large apartment building next to her home; she did not feel that the changes would result in affordable housing; she discussed vacancies; providing affordable loans; and concern with increased traffic and unsafe streets with increased density.

Ken Mand reported serving on the General Plan Update Committee noting that he was speaking on behalf of himself; he discussed guiding principles; the false narrative being put forth; the legal requirement to meet the state RHNA; dispersment of homes throughout the City; specifics still to be determined; allowing the subsequent land use alternatives process to be a robust conversation with the necessary time and budget; he felt that trying to adopt the General Plan Land Use Map in June might be too soon; and he proposed breaking out the Land Use Map separately from the General Plan or continuing it to after the February State Housing Element deadline and prior to the General Plan Environmental Analysis.

Khin Khin Gyi indicated that she was a member of the Committee on Homelessness which considers affordable housing; discussed the efficiency of converting existing commercial real estate into residential housing; consistency with actions in other areas of the country; conversion of the former Archer Hardware building; AB 2345; lower income unit requirements; and she asked the City Council to consider other concepts and think outside the box.

Steve Siegel felt that the decision should be made taking into account what residents want rather than what the City Council wants; he reported that homeowners that he had spoken to were against the elimination of single-family housing; discussed density; making an experiment of the City; the nearby example of Palms; financing for affordable housing; and cost per unit.

Patrick Meighan, Culver City for More Homes, encouraged the City to pass the proposed housing resolution; expressed compassion for friends and neighbors who want to retain the current situation; discussed legal requirements; and he indicated that new housing could not be solved while freezing all the wealthiest neighbors.

Ken Palmer provided background on himself; thanked the City Council for working to meet the coming state mandate; discussed his investment in the City; state housing needs; addressing housing needs in areas already zoned for larger developments; and he asked that the City Council listen to a larger group of homeowners.

Kelli Estes discussed trying to force in state housing rules that make no sense; the Ellis Act; the complex and convoluted process; potential lawsuits; places where more housing can be built; and she indicated that she was looking forward to election time.

Kevin Lachoff discussed his service on the Planning Commission; the difficulty of understanding the proposed guiding principles; potentially compulsory rezoning of parcels outside the typical land use study process; proposed automatic triggers; unintended consequences; basing policy changes on mid-term reviews with decisions left to staff and consultant recommendations, the Planning Commission, and City Council review; he asserted that zoning should be able to be relied upon by property owners as well as commercial and residential tenants; and he expressed concern with creating uncertainty with mandated timeframes.

Disa Lindgren, Culer City for More Homes, provided background on herself; asked the City to support the proposed resolution discussed opportunities for the community to learn about housing; efforts of the City to provide information; state law; and the need to further fair housing, remove constraints, and address climate change.

Freddy Puza indicated serving as a member of the General Plan Advisory Committee, but speaking on behalf of himself; he urged the City Council to approve the resolution; discussed the need for more housing to support all economic levels; felt it was irresponsible to continue to support housing policy that segregates the community based on race and income level; discussed equitable distribution of housing in the City; contributing to gaps between communities and neighborhoods; new RHNA goals; and taking the opportunity to increase inclusivity and economic stability.

Zennon Ulyate-Crow provided background on himself; asserted that carbon emission targets would not be met unless density is built-in; discussed the need for transport infrastructure and resources; resource intensive uses; incremental density; allowing people to live closer to their jobs; clarification that people would not be required to make a change, but the change would allow for options; he felt that allowing a maximum of four units, would not result in a huge change to the way things look; and he asked the City Council to adopt the resolution for the sake of the climate and the future.

Michelle Weiner provided background on herself; expressed support for the resolution and appreciation for the work of staff and those serving on the General Plan Advisory Committee; discussed the importance of the resolution for making the City more equitable, inclusive and sustainable; by-right building of McMansions vs. building bungalows that would provide more housing; and she felt that there were extensive opportunities for people to voice their opinions.

Ryan Olson, Culver City for More Homes, expressed support for the proposed resolution; discussed lagging construction that has not kept up with growth; providing enough housing so that children can stay in the area; addressing homelessness; guiding principles; and appreciation that Culver City wants to be part of the solution.

Mathew Stevens expressed appreciation to the City for taking the issue of housing seriously and support for the proposed resolution.

Mayor Fisch proposed pushing Items A-3 and A-4 to the April 26, 2021 meeting due to the late hour.

Discussion ensued between Council Members regarding the emotional nature of the important issue; RHNA numbers from the state; agreement on the necessity of the Housing Element; zoning; clarification that the City does not build anything, the City creates a system to allow the developers to build; Culver City as part of a region; the Ten Principles; conformance with state law; experimenting with academic ideas at the expense of the City; removing local barriers to new housing supply; creativity with the Housing Element; addressing criticism from neighbors resistant to change; opening doors with changes that are not understood; retrofitting single-family zoning to accommodate the least unobtrusive multi-family housing; the fact that the City Council is not permitted to bind future Councils with ordinary municipal ordinances; mandatory components of the General Plan; the legal effect of Housing Elements; modification of zoning and planning codes; concern with changing the face of the City; difficult to understand language being used in the process; statements that indicate it would be a shame if potential gains were squandered and local officials did not secure a margin of political insulation from local criticism; concern that what is being proposed is more than what is required; concern that a Trojan Horse is contained in the principals to open up R-1s and R-2s in the City without much discussion; and the purpose to promote an academic, theoretical model that has not been tried anywhere.

Additional discussion ensued between Council Members regarding length of the General Plan process; creating the constitution of the City for land use; transparency of the process; opportunity to be heard; potential changes to the way housing and zoning is done in the City; influencing the ultimate decision; framing every discussion about housing in the most stark context to stifle conversation; allowing all voices to be heard as part of the process; sincerity of the speakers; and the notification process for the item as compared to other items.

Jeremy Green, City Clerk, indicated that the notification process for the item was consistent with previous processes.

Further discussion ensued between Council Members regarding public engagement; state mandates; history of the City; the previous focus on commercial development to the detriment of housing; hearing everyone's voice no matter how long they have lived here, are a renter or are an owner; the importance of talking to lots of people with different opinions; the General Plan process; fear mongering that seeks to divide the community; agreement on issues, but disagreement on the how to address them; different approaches to addressing issues facing the City; concern that people are not listening to each other; looking at housing and transportation as linked issues; focusing on building more housing at all levels in conjunction with building more transportation and infrastructure that does not require driving a car; the importance of listening to each other; RHNA numbers; housing advocates; ghettoizing areas by putting all affordable housing there; creating effective change; missed opportunities to build affordable housing; the collective responsibility; benefits of equitable housing for everyone; use of academics; the theoretical realm vs. those who work for policy change; scholarship in conjunction with the hard work of staff, community input and Council consideration to find a way forward collectively; concern with homeowners dictating policy for a City that is 45% renters; and support for the proposed resolution.

Further discussion ensued between Council Members regarding campaign platforms; intentionality of policies; those seeking to change the status quo; the two-year process that is continuing; issues of race and class; the founding of Culver City as a model white city; opportunities to participate in the process and make the community inclusive; working to combat misinformation; including, acknowledging and valuing all lived experiences in the process; and support for the updates.

Additional discussion ensued between Council Members regarding concern with people who could not speak due to the lateness of the hour; the process; clarity of the information; complexities; concern that developers are going to come in and buy up land; concern with reaching members of the community who are technologically challenged; people who used to address the City Council at in-person meetings; confusion as to how the changes will create affordable housing; residents that do not have the money to create a fourplex; whether changes will actually help the City reach RHNA numbers; concern with jeopardizing the City for an experiment; creative use of existing structures; vacant buildings due to the pandemic; creation of mixed-use housing; and support for the creation of truly affordable housing for those most in need.

Further discussion ensued between Council Members regarding public engagement; recognition of issues facing the City; effective legalization of three homes on one lot for over a year; status quo bias; starting with first principles; key parts of the president's infrastructure bill; distrust in different areas of the City; compliance with state law; hitting RHNA goals; concerns about developers; catching up with existing demand; failure to meet previous affordable housing targets; the challenge to build affordable housing; addressing the middle class; creating zone capacity to address the lower income population; allowing people to age in place; multi-generational housing opportunities; and providing flexibility.

Additional discussion ensued between staff and Council Members regarding the fiscal analysis; items left to be done; ensuring money is available for other processes; agreement on basic principles; lack of awareness about the process by residents; outreach to educate and inform residents; focusing on the Land Use Map; pattern zoning; pre-approved plans; the General Plan process; outreach to particular neighborhoods; evaluation of outreach planned by the consultants; and concern the process is still too convoluted and there is still too little understanding of what the principles mean.

MOVED BY VICE MAYOR LEE AND SECONDED BY COUNCIL MEMBER MCMORRIN THAT THE CITY COUNCIL ADOPT A RESOLUTION ESTABLISHING GUIDING PRINCIPLES FOR CULVER CITY'S 2021-2029 HOUSING ELEMENT UPDATE.

THE MOTION CARRIED BY THE FOLLOWING VOTE:
