Ratio (FAR) calculations; the Planning Commission recommendations; correspondence received; concerns regarding the proposed reduction in FAR; anonymous comment received; staff recommendation to include additional language to ensure that redevelopment on single family homes with cross slope conditions will maintain existing stepping configuration and building pad moving up or down the slope; the proposed percentage approach to setbacks; the priority of emulating single-family homes; allowing for greater flexibility of design; the vertical encroachment plane; double calculation of staircases and elevators as floor area; discouraging bulk and mass in sensitive areas; standards in other area cities; concern with FAR restrictions; expanded rights to build ; and existing FAR ratios in neighboring cities.

John Kaliski, John Kaliski Associates (JKA), provided a presentation on the draft recommendations and related code amendments; discussed incorporating existing Culver Crest Overlay standards into a unified residential overlay district including the Blair Hills/Hetzler Road neighborhood to create one set of uniform standards for all hillside areas in Culver City; allowing for consistent review; reducing the single-family FAR; construction that better fits the scale and style of the neighborhood; adjustments to allowable building height; limitations to pitch; the second story front yard setback requirements; introducing an encroachment plane alongside yards; double height volumes: parking; setbacks for residential accessory structures; constraints to second story side yard facing roof decks; and development of City-wide educational single-family design guidelines.

Mayor Eriksson invited public comment.

Mimi Ferrel, City Clerk Specialist, read public comment submitted by:

Nan Herd: expressed support for the proposed restriction and wanted to see maintenance of driveways between homes.

Betty Isono: expressed opposition to approval of the proposed zoning code amendment during the pandemic; concern that the right to attend the meeting and object was being taken away from residents; concern with the photos and format of the survey; demographics of those who objected to the new and larger homes; and developers who buy to profit vs. those who want to build their dream home.

Ronnie Wong: expressed concern with being able to accommodate the size of their family; public outreach; and requested that the item return after summer to allow time to plan noting that the pandemic had caused delay to their plan submittal.

Jim Gelfat: expressed concern with non-approved grading activity by a developer and the impact to recent development in the lower Crest neighborhood; support for restrictions on artificially modifying grades and topography of a property; protecting development patterns of residential neighborhoods; properties that enjoy topographic diversity in the lower Culver Crest neighborhood; compound slope conditions; evenly terraced lots approved in the 1940s; the consistency of vertical and horizontal separation in the lower Crest; and the intent of the code to protect and preserve the condition.

Chak and Margarita Chie: discussed the process and the final JKA Report recommendation of a .45 FAR; expressed concern with the potential increase to the FAR; questioned the justification of the recommendation; concern that three years of careful study could be negated by a two hour Planning Commission meeting; and urged the City Council to take the utmost care in considering the matter.

Jennifer Trapnel: provided background on herself; expressed opposition to the proposed ordinance; concern with lowering property values; restrictions: modern family square footage needs; opposed second floor and front setback restrictions resulting in tiered wedding cake houses; creativity in housing design: and requested a less drastic zoning proposal.

Steve Mullen and Nancy Gulish: did not want to see remodeling options limited; expressed concern with the potential for reduced value of long term investments; and asked that new homes and remodels in Culver not be limited.

Andrew Ulmen: expressed concern with restricting property rights; financial implications to making such a change; housing shortages; people who work from home and need additional space; and he asked that the matter be held until a reasoned well-attended discussion could be had.

Dan Hyslop: expressed support for the proposed changes; discussed mitigating the effects of oversized home construction; reducing stress and hardship caused by mansionization while allowing for reasonable growth; stated that the 50% FAR was a much needed upgrade to building laws to rein in the imposing development in a city of small and closely adjacent residences; and expressed appreciation for leadership with far-reaching positive effects.

Annika Morris submitted identical comments to those made by Dan Hyslop.

Dr. Claudia Fajardo-Lira submitted identical comments to those made by Dan Hyslop.

Marla Koosed: discussed maintaining the scale of residential neighborhoods; work done by the City to revise single family design standards; state mandated ADU requirements and the resulting FAR of .74; she asserted that nothing had been improved with the exception of allowing ADUs to provide affordable housing stock and she proposed a compromise where the City chooses a .45 FAR with a maximum ADU size of 850 square feet which combined would result in a .62 FAR, or consider a process through the Planning Department where a homeowner can have a home of more than .45 if they are not building an ADU; and she noted the lack of regulations regarding ADUs.

Betty Kao: expressed support for reducing the FAR from 60% to 50%; discussed development on lots adjacent to her property;

Michelle Ford: expressed concern with the proposed reduction to the FAR; discussed the long history of single family home ownership in Culver City; the need for home improvement; potential loss of profit for developers if the FAR were reduced to .35; potential lawsuits and costs to taxpayers; she felt that the City should not fix problems that do not exist; asserted that the action would give the City Council too much power and authority over property rights; and pointed out the oath sworn by Council Members to uphold the Constitution.

Jeremy Green, City Clerk, read public comment submitted by:

Diane Haun and Scott Sasseen: expressed support for limitations on the size of a house built on a lot and reported receipt of an anonymous flyer asking them to write a letter in opposition of reductions to FAR.

Ken Mand: requested that a similar study of mansionization concerns in R2 areas be expedited.

Michael Murran acknowledged that the issue was contentious; reported buying a house in Culver City with the intention of adding on to it due to lax building requirements; felt that housing prices would be affected; acknowledged the desire to limit mansionization; asked that the item be postponed until the community could come together to voice their concerns; and he suggested grandfathering in those who had previously purchased their homes.

concern with increasing the pressure on R2 further; and addressing cross slope conditions.

Action Items

Item A-1

CC - Adoption of a Resolution Confirming the May 19, 2020 Twelfth Supplement to Public Order (Extension of Residential and Commercial Tenant Eviction Moratoria and Exceptions to Commercial Tenant Eviction Moratorium) Issued by the City Manager, as Director of Emergency Services, under City of Culver City Emergency Authority, Due to the Coronavirus Respiratory Disease (COVID-19) Pandemic

Mayor Eriksson invited public comment.

Mimi Ferrel, City Clerk Specialist, read public comment submitted by:

Rich Kissel: observed that most businesses were candidates for the pandemic relief programs that would help to pay employees and ongoing expenses, including rent; he asked for the swift reopening of retail stores with sensible conditions; observed support for large chain stores by allowing them to remain open during the pandemic; wanted preservation of affordable housing stock by not protecting tenants who do not need protection; and expressed concern that the wrong people were being helped while the community's most precious resources were being ruined.

Jeremy Green, City Clerk, invited Darrel Menthe to speak.

Darrel Menthe noted that the item would require most of the small restaurants and retail in Culver City to repay within six months; he asked that the repayment period be restored to twelve months; noted that the moratorium would likely expire on August 31 which would require payment of rent on September 1 with full payment of rent from then on while also repaying back rent; expressed concern with the ability of the businesses to meet those payment requirements noting the initial inability of most businesses to make pre-COVID earnings and recover lost monies; allowing as much time as possible to help businesses get back on their feet; and he expressed concern with undoing the work of the past 25 years and losing the character of the City.

Discussion ensued between staff and Council Members regarding the Los Angeles county model; the feeling that the extra time could make the difference between restaurants and businesses surviving or having to close; removing paragraph 4 to match the grace period for commercial tenants with 1-9 employees; changing to have only two classes of employees: clarification that any business under 200 employees would have 12 months to repay and those businesses over 200 employees, have no grace period; working to find a middle ground; staff time; and ease of administration.
