RECOMMENDATION

Staff recommends the City Council approve the revised classification specification for Traffic Signal Technician.

BACKGROUND/DISCUSSION

The Traffic Signal Technician classification specification has been revised to reflect the following:

- Current titles and changes in technology in relation to performing the essential duties.
- Minimum requirements have been revised to include high school graduation or equivalent.
- Language has been added under Licenses and Certificates to clarify that the Level I Traffic Signal Certificate required for the classification must be granted by the International Municipal Signal Association (IMSA). IMSA is a nationally-recognized organization whose certification is given only to individuals that have been determined to be qualified to perform specific technical tasks by virtue of their technical knowledge and experiences. This section has also been revised to specify that an IMSA Level II Traffic Signal Certificate or equivalent is preferred but not required.

At its December 6, 2006 meeting, the Civil Service Commission approved the revised classification specification for Traffic Signal Technician.
