Jamie Wallace, Culver City Neighbors United, provided background on the organization; discussed the petition to receive feedback on the $20 million dollar Jubilo issue; she provided a copy of the petition with feedback included; and she stated that spending the money on a private, non-City item was not a good idea.

Margaret Rainey discussed her efforts to communicate with staff and Council Member Vera concerning street construction at Jackson/Revere/Farragut; over-engineering of the project for a residential neighborhood; number of residents who drive in the residential area; number of accidents in the area; money spent on the project; the outlet at the end of Jackson; potential safety concerns; and she questioned the goal of the project.

Ethan Greenspan provided background on himself; discussed the dead end at Revere and Jackson; lack of accidents in the area; design of an intersection that resembles a freeway offramp; nine new signs that have created unsafe conditions; design of an unsafe, ugly system; he asked that the City Council visit the area; felt that putting two stop signs going both ways would address any safety issues; expressed concern with cars coming at each other with a yield sign; discussed the bus lane in Downtown Culver City; concern with a lack of public input in the design; the walk-through; and he asked that the design be removed and looked at.

Council Member Vera asked that Mr. Greenspan leave his information.

Sara Greenspan reported living on the street for 39 years; discussed addressing additional traffic due to the snicket with stop signs or a lighted crosswalk; computer design; four streets intersecting that go from different directions; narrow lanes; people that will no longer be able to park their cars in front of their houses; difficulties for delivery trucks due to lack of a turning radius; confusion with the intersection; concern with tax dollars going to something no one in the neighborhood wants; she reported being told that the garbage trucks could just drive over the curb; and she asked everyone to visit the site.

Patrick Godinez reported being a Culver City unhoused neighbor serving on the Advisory Committee on Housing and Homelessness (ACOH) and on the Outreach and Engagement Subcommittee; he advised against adding staff or funds to the Housing and Human Services Department for mental health as proposed in the upcoming budget; felt that adding more staff and services during a fiscal crisis was unnecessary as there were plenty of providers available to treat and pay for services besides the taxpayers of Culver City; expressed concern that taking services in-house would expose Culver City to potential malpractice suits; he proposed adding to the CCPD Mental Health program with CURES (Controlled Substance Utilization Review and Evaluation System); discussed 24 hour coverage vs. the 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. hours proposed; and he suggested working with universities and the public sector to build a metropolitan state mental hospital in the area such as exists in Norwalk.

Liz Reinstein reported living on Revere, expressed concern that no notice was given about the changes made; discussed the unsafe eyesore on their street; addressing the issue with two stop signs and a crosswalk; the opening of the Jackson Gate; unsafe conditions for her elderly neighbor backing out of his driveway; reduced property values; lights shining in windows; and she asserted that the changes were overkill and the money should be spent somewhere else.

Shirley Gonzales echoed comments of previous speakers about Revere Place; noted that the project was still not done and piles of cement were still there; discussed frustrated drivers; irate neighbors who were not notified about the changes; lack of an accident history in the area; the snicket; negative changes since the opening of the Jackson Gate; and she reported that neighbors were getting upset.
