Councilmember O'Leary invited public input.

The following members of the audience addressed the City Council:

Jan Cawley felt that the needs of the community and the homeowners were not being balanced and the buses were running at their expense; stated that the noise was very loud and physical; and she noted that the bus saved students a two-minute walk.

Katherine Howells appreciated the actions of the City Council; she expressed concern with the noise; suggested the students be dropped off at Overland Avenue; and she asked that the item be reconsidered.

Steve Mills asserted that the bus noise and vibrations were horrendous and unnecessary; discussed a reduction in the number of trips; expressed concern that residents were allegedly not noticed for a February meeting; he asked for a copy of the proposal that the City made to West Los Angeles College and he wanted the same access to the Transportation Director that West Los Angeles College has; he reported that Councilmember O'Leary had visited the Howells' house and experienced the bus noise; and he noted that the bus trip saved a couple of minutes but inflicted a large amount of noise on the surrounding neighbors.

March 7, 2011

Bob Howells was pleased that the City was considering reducing the number of trips; indicated that the noise was still deafening; he discussed the disruptions occurring every 8 minutes; questioned the need for the service; he expressed concern that the City allegedly valued the convenience of students over the residents; and he suggested keeping the same schedule but dropping students off at Freshman Drive.

At this time, Alice Prasad, Associate Analyst, reported receipt of 46 written comments in support of the item provided by Dr. Rose Marie Joyce, President, West Los Angeles College.

Dr. Rose Marie Joyce, President, West Los Angeles College, indicated that they had worked out a plan to reduce bus service by almost 50%; she supported the transit district recommendations but did not support any further reduction in service as she felt it would diminish student access and safety; she reported sincere efforts to create relief for Lakeside Villas neighbors; expressed concern with the plan as submitted, noting that the 10:30 p.m. bus was necessary to serve students; and she suggested that the proposed schedule be considered as a pilot program to be reevaluated to address shifting or growing ridership.

Betsy Regalado, Vice President, West Los Angeles College, encouraged the City Council to support the City transit district recommendation noting that their on-campus passenger carts were not permitted off campus for liability reasons and they did not have sufficient staff to transport students to and from the property line to their classes.

Michelle Long-Cottee noted that Scott Kecken had asked her to speak for him; she asserted that the City Council had to speak for the neighbors and all of Culver City; she discussed health issues of people who use the bus; noted that the neighbors had chosen to live near West Los Angeles College and enjoyed the benefits of that as well as the drawbacks; and she asserted that people deserved safe access to classes.

March 7, 2011

Khin Khin Gyi, M.D., Culver Crest Neighborhood Association, discussed parking issues; the health effects of noise stress to the neighbors; electric carts purchased to transport students to areas of the college; she pointed out that students still had to walk uphill; and noted that the issue had been created by the elimination of free parking by the College.

March 7, 2011

Paul Mayberry questioned how many disabled students attended West Los Angeles College and what the College did for the City; expressed concern that West Los Angeles College allegedly threatened to sue the City after failing to keep its promise to provide the service; questioned why the City would provide bus service on a campus; noted that the College had their own shuttles; he suggested that it would be cheaper for the City to pay for a shelter than to pay for the bus service; and he discussed the lack of a police gate at the front gate of the College.

Alice Taylor, West Los Angeles College faculty, suggested that if the buses were eliminated, there would be more cars in the neighborhood; she discussed the difficulty of balancing schedules between jobs, families and studies; and she commended the City for trying to balance the issues.

Mark Salkin expressed concern with alleged misstatements from Dr. Joyce; he discussed the main entrance of the College; noted his house was built before the College; he asserted that the community has been against the expansion of the College from the start; he suggested that Councilmembers come to his house; he discussed reduced property values; he expressed concern with notification issues and that Culver Crest was not included in the study; and he felt due process had not been had.

Ashok Pariku observed many empty buses and questioned ridership numbers; he felt the College needed to make a compromise; suggested that service stop at Freshman Drive; and that buses be made more efficient.

Joshua Michael S. Edra asserted that a reduction of buses would disrupt his schedule.

Elliot I. Axelband, Raintree Townhomes, discussed medical stress and health issues caused by repetitive loud bus noises; questioned how many students were affected or disabled; pointed out that there were more distance education students than there were students on campus; and he pointed out that the faculty and students who spoke had a vested interest in the outcome of the issue.

March 7, 2011

Judy Chow reported work with international students who do not drive and therefore depend on the bus; felt that stopping the bus would discourage them from attending the College; and she encouraged maintenance of the buses.

D'Lee Mayberry reported that many colleges do not have city provided bus services on their campuses; discussed the number of people who ride the buses; clarified that the buses could still go to Freshman Drive; and she expressed concern with how much the bus costs the City in the current difficult times.

Fran Leonard, West Los Angeles College faculty, pointed out that the College served the community; noted that students relied on public participation; noted the effort to get across campus; and she felt that the proposed compromise was workable.

Mr. Searcy, West Los Angeles College Associated Students Association, expressed support for maintaining the bus service; noted that students give back to the community; asserted that residents made a personal choice to live adjacent to the College; discussed safety; and he asserted that buses were full.

Kate Barlow, Raintree Condominium Association West Los Angeles College representative, Citizens Oversight Committee for Bond Expenditures for West Los Angeles College, and a graduate student at USC, noted the legitimate concerns and issues for both sides; clarified that the on-campus shuttles had been affected by funding shortages; noted that underserved students needed support; and suggested working to find other creative solutions.

Siraze Bawa, West Los Angeles College Associated Students Organization, asserted that buses were full in the morning; discussed the importance of serving the underserved; the Culver City Transit system; his health limitations and the necessity of the bus; and rising costs and the importance of education.

Dr. Rose Marie Joyce, President, West Los Angeles College, discussed the current method to address transportation of disabled students on campus.

Discussion continued between the City Council and staff regarding ridership patterns; the topography of West Los Angeles College; concern with keeping the 10:30 p.m. bus available; conducting a pilot study; the length of time Culver City has provided the bus service on campus; the College seen as part of the City; ensuring that those who need the bus are utilizing the service; quality of life for residents; the reduction in the number of trips; the importance of helping the students; the failure of West Los Angeles College to provide the service on their own; municipal bus service through college campuses; clarification that the service is operated as a separate entity from taxpayer dollars; noise issues; hope that the College will eventually fund the service; possible modifications during the summer months to address diminished ridership; whether there will be summer school this year; effective ways to publish any modifications; and the necessity of reprints of the bus schedule.

Dr. Rose Marie Joyce clarified that West Los Angeles College wanted to evaluate ridership in May and June for the fall semester and would work with the Transportation Director for the summer months.
