

In preparation for AEP's Sustainable City Plan proposal to the City Council, we are beginning to construct a tentative Sustainability Advisory Board to provide the AEP team with technical support throughout the process of developing the Sustainable city plan for Culver City, should the Council vote to move forward. The establishment of a Sustainability Advisory Board -- comprised of experts in the field and representing the community -- is considered a best practice for municipalities undergoing this process.

Thus far, the following people (all of whom are Culver City Stakeholders) have tentatively agreed to be on the Sustainability Advisory Board for this effort:

- Dr. Cully Nordby, Academic Director, UCLA Institute for the Environment and Sustainability
- Dr. Cassandra Rauser, Director, UCLA Sustainable LA Grand Challenge
- Paul Blagbrough LEED AP, CEM, Director, Environmental Stewardship Department, MUFG Union Bank
- David McNeill, Executive Officer, Baldwin Hills Conservancy
- Eric Sims, President, Culver City Downtown Business Association and Director of Operations, Kirk Douglass Theater
