Items from Staff

Louise Coffey-Webb, Public Art Collections Manager, reported on the continuing process to move and refurbish Don Merkt's Crossed Currents; discussed enhancements to The Lion's Fountain for increased safety; continued requests for the downtown public art and cultural walking tour books; and the City of Seattle's report, "Capacity Building for Racial Equity in Public Art".

Commissioners requested additional information regarding the Seattle report.

Lee Lawlor, Performing Arts Program Associate, announced online Performing Arts Grant Program funded events including the Los Angeles Doctors Symphony Orchestra's summer festival at www.ladso.org; a live streaming event in celebration of Women's Equality Day by Mash Up Contemporary Dance on August 23 at mashupdance.com; and zoom performances by Culver City Public Theatre from September 9-20 with registration available at www.ccpt.org.

Discussion ensued between staff and Commissioners regarding increased attendance of online events; tracking attendance numbers; evaluation requirements; the change in philosophy traditionally focused toward Culver City participation; broadening the reach of the program; and re-thinking the traditional performance model.

Christine Byers, Cultural Affairs Coordinator, announced that Dr. Yolanda Gorman would be presenting the Creative Economy Connect Report at the August 24 City Council meeting; expressed appreciation to Vice Chair Dickter for his help with the staff report; and she indicated that the developer for Brick & Machine had provided a glass sample for the public art project by Veronika Kellndorfer.

Items from Commissioners

Commissioner Pali reported that he had received the glass sample from Germany for Brick & Machine and the project is moving forward.

Commissioner Wisnosky Stehlin reported that the City Council had approved the request from Culver Arts to delay repayment of funds until 2021; the Artist Laureate Program Subcommittee met and received an update from Alexey Steele on his work to date in 2020; the Performing Arts Grant Subcommittee had met and was considering ways to move forward and also discussed the task for artists to use their creativity to find a way forward within the crisis.

Chair Fleischer suggested inviting the Artist Laureate to provide an update to the Commission; thanked the Commission for their advocacy in delaying the repayment of the loan to the Culver Arts Foundation; discussed Theatre Communications Group's Advocacy Day on August 21 to advocate for funding for the arts; and a recent editorial in the Los Angeles Times that artists need to be paid as the arts are essential.
